A "Triangle" of Fertility

Speaking at Montreal, Hon. L. St. Laurent, cited, as one project in which Canada should invest whatever amount of money is necessary, the control and utilization of the water which falls on the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains—a great part of which now runs away to the Arctic ocean and to Hudson Bay in rivers flowing from the foothills across the plains.

The irony of this otherwise admirable drainage system is that in dry summers some of these rivers flow through parched and crumbly soil in which there is no more fertile on this continent. To turn this waste water to account is the project of which the Minister was speaking, and which he recommended to the attention of his hearers in the strongest terms.

The importance of this is not so much in what was said as in where it was said. Western people hardly need converting on the subject of conserving and using the water which is so uselessly down to the sea. In parts of southern Alberta they have seen miracles of production accomplished by irrigation. In Saskatchewan they know what the saving of even local water supplies can do in modifying drought conditions. It is in eastern Canada that this gospel needs to be preached. Because water is so plentiful to western people it is not apparent—and not very interesting—there. And because the members of parliament, who will finally determine the money necessary to give irrigation water to the millions and other conservation measures—or is not to be voted.

Whoever directs attention to this section of Canada to the importance of controlling and making use of these water supplies is doing good service to the west. And if his hearers can be led to see the importance of this, it will be to put through this job of making the waste water produce crops on the plains will cost "hundreds" of money, some hundreds of millions of dollars in the total. That fact cannot be blinked, and had better be emphasized. For the proposition is not to spend the money on irrigation, so long as the investment pays, the larger it is the better.

That it will be a paying proposition to put water on the dry areas, where this is practicable, does not depend on argument for profit. The science stands in the fact that when water falls in the dry belt, to the amount of fifteen inches or in a year, phenomenal crops are the result, given water. The fact that the water will be the greatest grain-producing area of its size on this continent. It is that whenever nature supplies the necessary water, the investment is paid. Not all that great area can be irrigated, nor made every-year productive by a combination of reclamation and other good methods of agriculture. It can be redeemed from the "semi arid" condition and turned into good agricultural land of farming country. It will pay to make investment and get the benefits, pay locally and nationally. To control the water, to conserve it in the eastern provinces on that point is the first step.

Canada Looks On

In his message on the "state of the Union," President Truman naturally directed the attention of Congress to the relations existing between Canada and management, that being the factor which has most to do with the present being what it is.

Naturally, he finds that these relations are not very satisfactory from the point of view of the nation. Outside these employers and labor leaders who have been in the question over their own direct interest, there will be little or no disagreement with this conclusion.

The public generally will agree, having in mind the coal strike and the steel strike, and the reactions from the labor side, that the present set-up gives no guarantee that supplies or even vital necessities can be met in the event of a strike. Labor and management go into a clinch on a question of wages or hours or other operating conditions.

The legislation which the President proposed to safeguard the public in this respect does not go nearly as far as the national security act. The Republican congressional majority suggests. His program may be rated as a half-way plan, intended to forestall more drastic measures.

Whether this will be accepted by Congress will depend on the specific faults shown to exist in the statutory regulation of industry to be known, for early action on some kind can be taken. The proposal goes as far as the public interest requires, and it may be inferred that it is not a proper subject for outside discussion. It may be inferred that it is not a proper subject for outside discussion. It may be inferred that it is not a proper subject for outside discussion.

The Canadian consumer is as much entitled to security as his neighbor in the United States. The boundary line. What is done at Washington may set the pattern for protective action at Ottawa.

Another Conference?

Premier McNaughton of British Columbia got a better deal from the Dominion government than he wants to know whether Ottawa will amend the terms and put his province on an equal footing.

It may be assumed that the other four provincial governments which have reached tentative agreements with Ottawa will be asked to have some say in the final decision.

In the end, the majority of the treatment, or some of the proposed agreements could be scrapped. No provincial government could face its legislature with an admission that it was to get less money than another from the federal treasury, population and other factors considered.

A demand for revision of the early agreement was foreseen, and it is now being made. British Columbia delayed in making a deal and is now for more than the first-concessions got.

Since one province thus got more, why not ask for a revision upward of the agreements which would otherwise have been acceptable?

This bargaining was nearly inevitable when the Dominion-Provincial conference was wrecked by Premier Dupuis and Premier Drew and the alternative had to be adopted of making individual bargains between the federal and provincial governments. Where and when it will end, nobody knows.

It may result in the holding of another conference. Somehow a common basis for agreements would have to be reached.

The League Steps In

The Arabs consented finally to send delegates to the London conference on Palestine. But it wasn't the Palestine Arabs who made the decision. These demanded that the conference be boycotted unless British agreed in advance to accept their views.

In which case, of course, the conference would be pointless, and probably would never open at all. The boycott demand is a poor camouflage attempt to get a verdict before the case was argued.

But the Arab League over-ruled the local tacticians and said it will be represented when the parley opens. The League speaks for seven Arab States: Egypt, Syria, Trans-Jordan, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Lebanon and Yemen. In rejecting the boycott proposal the League virtually disclaimed the Palestine Arabs who made the decision may imply.

Any change in the Palestine situation is almost certain to be for the better. It may be too good to suppose that the League is willing to agree to a partition of the disputed territory and the setting up of a Jewish state. But it may be assumed that its leaders have some possible objectives in the situation, and it will be delegates to London? And why tell the Palestine Arabs they can't block the negotiations?

The Hollywood press agents appear so far to have ignored the news that "Henry IV," a British film, has been adjudged the best picture of the year. The film is not Hollywood output.

There have been mass student demonstrations in China against the British. The 30 million people of India put the handwriting on the wall for all white man's overlordship in Asia who fear two words of challenge to the British, "Quit India."

Too Old at Thirty

by HARPER PROWSE, M.L.A.

It is hard to imagine anything which could be more unjust than the practice, now being widely adopted by cities and other employers who have superannuation schemes, of refusing to employ anybody more than 30 years of age. The reason for this, of course, is that this practice is based on the assumption that the employee will make contributions to the superannuation fund for at least 30-35 years of service, and that a decent retiring pension will be paid to him when he is 60 or 65. But from a common-sense point of view it is no heartless a thing to deny human ingenuity has yet conceived.

If this practice becomes widespread it will only be a question of time until the job-seeker who is more than 30 years of age will find that all doors are closed to him, with the exception, of course, of temporary or unskilled employment. And once this principle has been established there is the danger of the limiting age may be steadily decreased for the reason that the longer a man or woman pays into the fund the larger the pension they will be able to receive.

THE PRINCIPLE employed by such organizations as police forces or fire departments of insisting that new recruits should be young is sound enough. But this is because in these jobs the work is strenuous and good health is essential and have a definite bearing on a man's ability to perform his job. But when this is applied to clerical and office work, where youth has no particular bearing on efficiency, the practice is absurd. It is particularly absurd when the job requires a high degree of skill and experience, which the policy becomes senseless.

This practice is of special importance to the public, who are employed by such organizations as police forces or fire departments of insisting that new recruits should be young is sound enough. But when this is applied to clerical and office work, where youth has no particular bearing on efficiency, the practice is absurd. It is true that most of these men, who might have found their way into employment had they not been in the services, have now passed the 30 year mark. This policy makes it impossible for them to get on in the service, and there is some reason for believing in some cases at least, that it has been dreamed up for the special purpose of getting around regulations which provide for preference being given to veterans.

Like so many other things which are happening today this policy has been slipped in unobtrusively so that it is unknown to the general public. I doubt whether a public which had given some thought to this question as a solution to anything, it has a tendency to blind men to the employers, which may or may not be a good thing.

Fortunately the policy has not received such widespread acceptance as to the moment when the serious effects have been felt. It is not too late to do something. But right now it seems to me that the only way to consider this situation seriously before it becomes so widely adopted that it is too late to change their employment if they desire.

Strike Three in Asia

German yoke. The people of China and East Asia do not want American armies of occupation for the same reason. There is nothing new in this. In fact, the longer a foreign army of occupation has been in a country, the more fervent the desire to expel it. Witness the rising anger in Egypt against British military occupation.

AS PRINCESS ELIZABETH, the prospective Queen of Canada, as well as of Britain, constitutional lawyers may argue whether it would be necessary for her to go to the United States to see the Canadian government before her engagement to Prince Philip of Greece could be announced.

Large Farmers Join Forces

A progressive future for agriculture in Alberta depends in a great measure on the unity of its farm organizations, and an opportunity such as never was presented before was now within their grasp in consolidating their forces through adoption of the provisional constitution revamping the Alberta Federation of Agriculture to provide for fusion of the United Farmers of Alberta and the Alberta Farmers' Union into one mighty force for this purpose.

This in essence was the nature of addresses delivered before 1,000 delegates and visitors to the AFU convention Tuesday evening by delegates bringing their greetings to the union on the eve of one of their most important resolutions, the one concerning amalgamation with the UFA and AFA. The latter has already approved the move.

James Jackson, vice-president of the AFU and official delegate to the AFA as well as a regional board member of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, was chairman of the evening meeting, which was held in the Towers building.

Charges Communist Propaganda in Films

Declaring that some films had been distributed in Alberta containing Communist propaganda, Hon. R. Earl Anley, Alberta minister of education, Tuesday criticized this practice in an address to the conference of field representatives of the National Film Board being held in the Legislative Buildings.

MR. ANLEY is the second provincial cabinet member to bring up the topic of propaganda films within the last few days. Hon. A. J. Cooke, provincial secretary, also made a statement at the same conference earlier in the week, that regarding regulations of the National Film Board in the legislative building.

MR. ANLEY said that the chief objection being taken by the government to these films is that they are not "labelled" as propaganda films and he added "there is no reason to believe that these films are more than subtle propaganda."

One film in particular was selected as an example by Mr. Anley. This purported to be a film of the United States, but the inference was clear that the fine war effort resulted from Communist form of government, he said.

While it is true that the war effort was excellent, the same might also be said for the United States, he said.

Canada or Britain, both with a Communist form of government, he said.

He also had a splendid war record, declared Mr. Anley.

The speaker said that the National Film Board was responsible for the distribution of these films, and he urged that the board be held responsible for the distribution of these films.

He also said that the board should be held responsible for the distribution of these films.

Members of the National Film Board include distinguished Canadian actors and actresses, and he urged that the board be held responsible for the distribution of these films.

Urges Definition Provincial Rights

Respective federal and provincial responsibilities of Dominion and provincial governments should be defined and clarified even if it involves redefining of constitutional rights in the coming years, Premier Ernest Manning said today in an address to the Dominion and provincial governments.

MR. MANNING said that the Dominion and provincial governments must accept full responsibility for those matters to which they have been assigned as fields of jurisdiction and which are related to dual administration and the tendency to centralize at Ottawa.

Centralization is a perennially un-desirable feature of government, he said.

Therefore each government, provincial or federal, must be assured of sufficient revenue to discharge fully its respective constitutional responsibilities.

Disbursements of AFU Reported

Farm Strike Cost $10,370

The 30-day farm products withholding strike, staged last Sept. 8 in Alberta, cost the Alberta Farmers' Union $10,370.23, it was revealed Tuesday in the financial statement of the organization, read to more than 1,200 delegates and visitors to the AFU's convention which opened for five days in the Towers building.

R. J. Boutiller, secretary-treasurer of the organization, said in answer to a question that from the action fund out of which the withholding fund had been disbursed certain district associations of the union had been given grants.

"What they did with it I am not prepared to say," he added, indicating it "must" have been used to pay fines of AFU picketers, caught in the toils of the law for activities which saw a number of them jailed.

AT THE END OF the AFU's fiscal year, October 31, its accounts showed a total in receipts of $8,883.03. Of this membership dues made up $3,850.00, and contributions to the action fund amounted to $4,133.03, leaving a balance at year end of $41,792.80.

At the beginning of the moving season a resolution to have the press and non-members banned from the meetings was turned down unanimously.

There was much discussion regarding the present form of grading farm products particularly in the case of the wheat. A resolution was adopted which was to be presented to the farm bodies with the view of establishing a system of grading as to the same. When this was done, the grades to be the same to the producer as to the consumer. When this was done, the grades to be the same to the producer as to the consumer.

To Lessen Traffic Danger Plan Action to Keep Children Off Streets

Action to curb the practice of school children and youth walking four or five abreast on Edmonton streets intended only for motor traffic, thereby endangering themselves and smaller children who follow their lead, as well as proving a considerable worry to motorists, was endorsed at the luncheon meeting of the board of directors Edmonton branch, Alberta Motor Association, at the Club Roosevelt, Tuesday noon. C. H. Grant, K.C. presided.

If Public Needs to be Met Forty Rural Health Units Said Required in Alberta

If the public health needs of Alberta are to be adequately served 40 rural health districts will need to be formed, Dr. M. R. Bow, deputy minister of health for the province, told a conference of National Film Board representatives meeting in the legislature buildings Tuesday.

pressing the AFA board as being made up of "landlord farmers" saying he knew of no board member who was not actually operating his farm personally.

He said he was not in favor of "unionism" in any field, due to the vast waste of effort thus expended in this instance he could find no justification for three farm organizations striving for leadership in Alberta.

Adopting the provisional constitution did not mean that the AFA would be "taking over" the other two organizations. It would be the means through which they could centralize a concerted power for the benefit of all.

He warned that the trouble-laden time experienced by farmers in the past were still a factor to be considered for the future, and that a united effort and co-operative determination on the part of all farm organizations of the province was the wisest method of fully meeting any possible emergency.

THIS WAS ESPECIALLY true of the recent increase in western producers of $4.30 per hundredweight for hogs, he said.

He strongly advocated diversification of production in the province with emphasis on extending production of livestock and other products in order to take advantage of the price boosts recently announced.

He observed there had been a great deal of interest in the raising of livestock, and particularly hogs, during the past year. Reasons for this were well known, he said, mentioning discrimination on livestock prices between the west and east in Canada.

Mr. Allen told the delegates they would be asked to pass an opinion on the upper prices advanced as an encouragement to increase livestock output, and hoped they would confer with farm organizations on the matter before concluding it in their own district.

"THERE NEVER was a time when it was more essential that we speak with a united voice on the matter of prices for hogs and other livestock," he said, mentioning his address with greetings and best wishes for success in the AFU's first day convention.

Supporting voices were heard for proposed amalgamation of the three Alberta farm organizations, prominent in farming and co-operative circles throughout the province.

They were Ben S. Plummer, chairman of the Alberta Wheat pool, who was critical of the proposed increase in freight rates sought by the Railway Association of Canada; David Smeaton, manager of the Alberta Co-operative Wholesale Association, who advocated the use of "cooperatives" contained in co-operative philosophy; and J. M. Murray, secretary of the Alberta Association of Farmers.

MR. WHEATLEY renewed the burden placed financially on western farmers through the British wheat agreement. Highest price for wheat was $1.15 per bushel, while the western farmer while the wheat was sold on the open market for $0.75. He believed in helping British farmers, he said, and was going to be made "the burden should come out of the Dominion treasury, not rest on farmers of the west."

Labor Relations Theme of Talk

Gyro Stan Bow was the speaker at a luncheon meeting of the Edmonton Gyro Club at the Macdonald hotel Tuesday noon. He spoke on labor relations and gave a general picture of the labor situation in Canada today, and outlined the setup and function of conciliation and arbitration boards.

Mr. Bow traced the extension of full-time rural health districts in the province, stating that at the outbreak of the last war there were nine districts in the province. Despite staff shortages and other difficulties during the war years, five additional districts had been formed.

STAFF DIFFICULTIES are still adding up expansion of the program and a new policy of giving nursing graduates three months special field training is being adopted in an attempt to partially solve this pressing problem, the deputy minister said.

These nurses would join the staffs of the rural health units following field training and complete full training at a later date under direction of the AFA.

ANOTHER trend in integration of preventive treatments services under one department, this will become more pronounced as time goes on, he predicted.

The question of costs in a large problem in public health services, he said.

"You only get what you pay for," he said. Cost of public health services are not high compared with other services, he believed.

Not one health board closed down during the war and there is strong reluctance to drop any public health services once established.

ADDRESSES by Miss Sheila Mackay, assistant supervisor of public health nursing and director of health educational services and Clifford MacNeil, sanitation inspector for the Edmonton unit, were other speakers heard at Tuesday's meeting.

Miss Mackay said the film board of good of great assistance to the district nurses who work in large areas that are often isolated from the great centres of the province.

D. BOUVIER, field representative for the National Film Board in Edmonton, was chairman on Tuesday morning.

The conference continues Wednesday and Thursday.

The McMurtry tax sands and pilot plant formerly operated by the government and now in private company, was promoted in another resolution which deemed the early termination of the strike as a public enterprise and not turned over to private interests to exploit for profit."

THE UNION IS STILL pressing for the province to take action and reaffirms its demand that the Alberta government establish a board to investigate into the records of all producers, manufacturers and distributors of white products, to determine justifiability of recently increased prices.

This resolution was supported unanimously by the delegates and was sponsored by 13 local units of the union. It further urged that immediate action be taken by the government in regulating prices according to the findings of the board.

Several delegates stated the beginnings of loss of personal liberty in anything which aimed at removal of censorship, and resolution was passed which protested strongly in co-operative philosophy, and in the provincial government in establishing a political censorship of media.

STIFFER PENALTIES for high speed driving and for driving while under the influence of intoxicants was advocated in another resolution which was adopted.

During the afternoon the board of directors report was read by J. C. Kerns, Vain and adopted by Secretary B. J. Houttiller who read his report on the progress of the financial statements, was accepted. This showed the present salaries of the secretary and president as $2,000 per annum each. General chairman of the convention was Henry Young, Miller, while the administration was handled by A. D. Olsen, Homage.
